Aids & Adaptations

INTRODUCTION

For many people with a Disability, having the correct equipment or aid can make the difference between being restricted to bed or home and being independent.

Aids and adaptations can mean anything from a simple walking stick through to complex environmental controls to facilitate the remote switching on or off of a variety of appliances in the home.

If you require information on wheelchairs, there is a separate factsheet available.

There is a list of useful telephone numbers for finding suppliers of equipment and aids at the end of this fact sheet.

STATUTORY AUTHORITIES

If you have a “clinical need” for an aid or adaptations, you should be referred to your local hospital, clinic or social services, who can assess your needs. If you are not being treated at a hospital, this is best done via a GP referral.

If you do obtain equipment from a statutory authority, you may be charged for it, but, if it needs maintaining, this will be done without cost to the user.

SOURCES OF AIDS & ADAPTATIONS

- Local Authority Social Services
- National Health Service
- Education and Employment Services
- Commercial Suppliers and Retailers
- Second-Hand & Refurbished Equipment

ARTIFICIAL LIMBS AND APPLIANCE SERVICE

If you have, or need an artificial limb, they are provided and maintained free of charge by the NHS. The Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital in Stanmore is the regional area centre for artificial limbs.

The Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital Artificial Limb Centre
Telephone: 020 8909 5505

If you need a “surgical appliance”, such as a truss, surgical footwear or support stockings, your doctor will be able to refer you to an appliance centre at your local hospital. There is a charge for some items, such as wigs and elastic stockings, but if you are claiming a means tested welfare benefit, such as income support, this charge may be waived.

You can now obtain a wide variety of surgical appliances from chemists, who can order items for you if they do not have them in stock.

LOCAL AUTHORITY SOCIAL SERVICES

Can provide aids and equipment for your independence at home if you have recently been discharged as a hospital in-patient.

This particularly applies if you have undergone surgery.

Items are loaned for a set period (until you have recovered sufficiently well so as not to need the item(s) any more). Items such as orthopaedic chairs, trolleys, zimmer frames, commodes, bed pans and urinals may be loaned if there is a clinical need for such an item.

If you have a “permanent and substantial impairment” which restricts your mobility or ability to carry out “day to day” tasks such as washing, dressing and cooking a hot meal, you should ask for a home assessment from Social Services, who can send a social worker and/or occupational therapist to your home to assess your needs. They may be able to arrange for the installation of minor adaptations to your home, such as a ramp for wheelchair access, grab rails around a bath or toilet or external rails or handles to aid your entrance and exit from your house.

More major adaptations, such as stair lifts, downstairs toilet facilities etc can be provided but you will have to complete a financial statement, showing your income and expenditure and, if an adaptation can be provided, you may be asked to contribute to the whole, or part, of the cost.

NATIONAL HEALTH SERVICE (NHS)

If your hospital “professional” (such as a doctor, consultant, occupational therapist, physiotherapist or hospital social worker) considers that you require specialised equipment or aids to treat your condition or help your recovery; you will be given an NHS assessment of needs. Equipment loans can be anything from a couple of days to “open-ended”. Items that may be loaned by the NHS include oxygen cylinders and nebulisers if you have severe asthma or breathing problems and incontinence equipment and supplies.

If you receive incontinence services through your GP or hospital, you may be able to receive a regular supply of pads etc, via your district nurse. Contact your GP or hospital to see if this can be arranged.

Voluntary Organisations (such as HAD.org.uk)

HAD.org.uk can advise on local retailers. For more information contact the Information Officer at HAD.org.uk on 020 8861 9920.

The British Red Cross offer an equipment loan scheme for people with a permanent or temporary impairment. This includes bath seats, commodes, bedpans and urinals, and bed/chair backrests.

A nominal charge may be made for loaned equipment.

Education and Employment Services

If your child has special needs and is “statemented” by the Local Education Authority, any equipment or aids necessary for the child to reach his or her full educational potential should be provided by the school, via the Education Authority.

In the case of children with a sensory impairment, this could mean provision of a “loop” system in class rooms for those children with a hearing impairment, magnifying aids for children with a visual impairment or special display cards and computer hardware and software for children with a learning disability, who may have difficulty communicating.

Disabled Students Allowance is for students who are going to study in Higher Education. Following an assessment, equipment can be provided to meet your needs whilst studying. This includes equipment and the cost of a non-medical helper.

Under the “Access to Work” part of the Equality Act, an employer must provide a disabled employee, equipment or aids/modifications to enable that employee is able to work alongside his/her non-disabled peers. This also applies to disabled interviewees applying for a job. This may include special or adapted furniture, such as seating, to enable the employee to work with less discomfort or pain, communication aids or a signer or note taker, for employees with a sensory impairment.

Specialised computer input devices such as single hand keyboards and “roller ball mice” are readily available from specialised suppliers and do not involve a great financial outlay. Employees, or potential employees asked to attend an interview, should openly discuss their needs with the employer and should also make an appointment to see the Disability Employment Advisor, attached to their local Employment Services or Job Centre plus Office. The telephone number can be found in a local telephone directory.

Commercial Suppliers and Retailers

Aids and equipment can be purchased from specialised mail order companies or “High Street Retailers”. Many mail order companies advertise in the national press, particularly in the weekend editions. Mail order companies have to abide by strict regulations before advertising by such means. It is advisable to speak to the company personally to discuss your requirements or request a catalogue or brochure before placing an order. Don't forget that, if paying by credit card, you have the additional assurance of a claim or refund from the credit card company if your items get lost or stolen in transit, but, as always, in such unfortunate circumstances, speak to the supplier first.

Branches of high street shops, such as Boots and catalogue companies such as Argos stock a range of commonly requested items and can order items not usually stocked.

The larger the branch, the greater range of products they are likely to keep. Most localities have a specialised disability equipment shop and should be able to advise you as to the best purchase for your needs. These shops are often in competition with each other, so it is best to shop around to find the best choice and the lowest prices.

Second-Hand & Refurbished Equipment

Often a second-hand or refurbished equipment or aid can provide an ideal solution when buying a new item is not feasible, either through cost or unavailability.

High cost items, such as wheelchairs or stairlifts can often be bought second-hand (wheelchairs and electric scooters) or refurbished (stairlifts). These can be obtained directly from the manufacturer or supplier in some cases. If you have the need for a stairlift and have been refused the installation of one by social services, provided that your need is for a standard installation (i.e. a straight staircase run), a refurbished or reconditioned unit can be fitted at a much lower cost than a new one.

Many people advertise second-hand items in publications such as Exchange & Mart and Loot, both of whom usually have a section devoted to disability equipment. Both of these publications can be obtained from any newsagent. (Exchange & Mart – weekly, Loot-daily).

Do not forget that you will have to travel to view/purchase the goods or pay for postage or carriage. You do not have any claim against the private seller if the item does not work or fails to meet your expectations. If you have internet access, Ebay is worth considering.

A number of dedicated disability publications run “classified ads” sections. These include Disability Now, The Disabled Drivers Association magazine and the Disabled Motorist Club's newsletter.

Details of these can be obtained from HAD.org.uk's Information Service.

Adaptations to your Home

Many areas have home improvement schemes such as Care & Repair and Staying Put who give advice and practical help. They also know about where to get help towards costs of any work you need doing. Some have Handyman schemes - people who will do odd jobs for you, free or at very low cost. They also have lists of local services such as plumbers and decorators that they have approved.

The House proud Scheme enables elderly or disabled people to have major (or minor) adaptations or modifications done to their house against a secure loan placed on their property.

Telephone 0800 783 7569 for an introductory video and further information.

If you are Disabled or have a long term illness, your local authority should help you with adaptations to your home or any equipment that they accept you need. This involves a financial assessment, and the help you get will depend partly on your income and their finances. Contact Social Services.

If you are elderly or Disabled and live in the Wealdstone area of Harrow, the Harrow Handyman Scheme may be able to help with simple jobs such as fitting door or window locks, small decorating jobs and replacing a tap washer.
